Pointwise V16.00 Released – October 8, 2007

After more than 4 calendar years and over 25,000 person hours of development time, Pointwise, Inc. today released its next generation meshing software, named Pointwise.

Pointwise cuts the time to generate high-quality CFD meshes through its flat, intuitive graphical interface that gives rapid access to the powerful meshing techniques Pointwise, Inc. engineers have developed over the last 23 years. In addition, it provides shortcuts through the meshing process like a new automated assembly procedure that builds three-dimensional volume grids from a jumble of grid components with a simple click of a button. Pointwise's usability is further enhanced by a multiple-level undo and redo capability with a user configurable number of levels.

Besides simplifying the meshing process, Pointwise also introduces unified geometric curve and grid curve drawing, simultaneous transformation of CAD geometry and grid, improved CGNS support including import, and the ability to access up to 16 Exabytes of memory with its 64-bit architecture.

You can read all about Pointwise V16.00 in the Release Notes:

Pointwise requires a new and separate license server from Gridgen. This means a new license file must be generated for you to be able to run Pointwise. However, this is included under the maintenance agreement for all client sites with current maintenance on their Gridgen licenses. Be sure to download and read the Quick Installation guide for all the details when downloading Pointwise to install on your platforms.

You can download Pointwise directly from our web site under the Support pages:
